Art Unit: 1636

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-6 and 8-10 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Musil et al., for reasons of record as set forth in the two previous Office Actions.

At page 5 of the amendment filed 7 July 2010, Applicants argue that more ligands are present at a higher density in the claimed invention than in that of Musil et al. However, the cited reasoning for this is unclear, appearing to rely on a distinction based on the presence of ligands externally and internally. However, in this regard, it is not clear what the distinction is, as both the claimed invention and that of Musil et al. have internal and external ligands.

Applicants then argue that the claimed invention uses pore sizes which exclude plasmid but permit RNA. However, at the paragraph bridging pages 6 and 7 of Musil et al., it is constructively taught that anion exchange chromatography and size exclusion chromatography may be used in combination in the disclosed invention. As such, this aspect of the claimed invention was anticipated by Musil et al., as well.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

Art Unit: 1636

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
